Letter from President & Executive Director

Faith Bodnar

Executive Director

Advancing inclusion through systems level advocacy is a core function of Inclusion BC. This work is built on our relationships and connections with families and individuals with intellectual disabilities, our member agencies, local leaders and decision makers. It's the long term and evolving nature of these relationships that fuels progress and challenges assumptions about where people with intellectual disabilities belong and how they will be accommodated and supported to live their lives as full citizens.

What makes Inclusion BC unique is our capacity to draw on all these relationships to bring our movement together, to widen spheres of influence, to build awareness, to bring resources to partnership tables and ultimately, to build grassroots social change. These relationships are investments in the long haul of our social movement for human rights and equality for people with intellectual disabilities. As we build our capacity, we also invest in the work of our allies and partners, knowing that it takes everyone to make truly welcoming communities for all.

Change is most often gradual and incremental and we rarely see the full extent of the impact of our day to day work. It's the investments we make in relationships with each other that build equity over the long term. While lasting change takes time, the values of full citizenship and human rights that fuel our hearts and minds, do not change.

Reflecting on the past year, the importance of investing in relationships provided significant opportunities and momentum for Inclusion BC to be part of important decisions. We live in a truly dynamic province and Inclusion BC has been able to respond to changing political landscapes because of the long term investments we've made. Our integrity as a solid, unified movement for 62 years ensures we are at the tables where changes to income benefits were made, where plans to address poverty are being developed and where we are appreciated for our long commitment as an ally and partner in building a strong and vibrant province.

It's our pleasure to welcome you to Inclusion BC as we highlight the impact of our work in 2017/18. It's also our privilege to thank you for contributing to building a province where we all belong. When we look at the past year, those investments we've made in each other have made a critical difference and they will continue to create a bright future for us all.

VICTORIA

Hope. Help. Home.

Community Living Victoria is a long-standing member of Inclusion BC. We all value and benefit from the advocacy that is done provincially by Inclusion BC. There are many examples of how their important work has resulted in better outcomes for the people we support. Recent highlights include the increase to disability benefits and the compensation for Woodlands survivors. Inclusion BC, along with the efforts of other provincial organizations, truly makes a difference!

In addition to participating in many of Inclusion BC's advocacy efforts over the years, we have also enjoyed the opportunity to co-host the Inclusion BC Conference and AGM in Victoria. We look forward to once again welcoming delegates from across the province to our beautiful city in 2019.

We recently completed a project with Catalyst Community Developments to review all of our properties with the intent of expanding our affordable housing options. Community Living Victoria currently manages 35 portable housing subsidies through BC Housing, so individuals can afford a decent place to rent in neighbourhoods they choose. Some of those people are part of our Supported Apartment Living program, which provides daily support in an apartment building with easy access to amenities such as shopping and transit. Other subsidies are directed to individuals in our Independent Living program.

We also have 6 subsidized apartments in a larger BC Housing building and have a partnership agreement with the Capital Region Housing District for 6 units to be prioritized for people we support over the next 3 years.

We are working with M'Akola Development Services to explore providing affordable housing on our main office site which encompasses 3 acres of land. Community Living Victoria has established relationships with many housing service providers in our area and we are always looking for opportunities for subsidized units. We anticipate that affordable housing will continue to be an issue for all of us in the years ahead.

Individual Advocacy

families helped through our

Our advocacy program provides direct one-to-one support for families and individuals. Most people who contact us have been unable to solve a problem through other channels.

The situations are complex and often span months or years. Many involve legal battles and government appeals.

Inclusion BC is the only organization of its kind providing this type of advocacy support for people with intellectual disabilities and their families in BC. Last year we expanded our individual and family advocacy program to meet rapidly growing demand. This allowed us to help 424 people this past year.

"Thank you for making sense of the alphabet soup of acronyms that surrounds this sector. I have called many organizations that tried to be helpful but they just seemed to make me more confused".
- Sue, Burnaby

Information and Referral

Inclusion BC provided information, support and referral to thousands of people throughout the province. This included people with intellectual disabilities, their families, caregivers, staff from community agencies and government, and others.

Through email, phone, website and social media, we connected over 160,000 people with resources and information on ways to support inclusion. This included information on children and youth services, employment, income support (disability benefits), education, housing, healthcare, the justice system, CLBC funding and eligibility, financial planning (RDSP) and planning for the future.

These efforts are supported by our strong partnerships with other community organizations, the Canadian Association for Community Living and Inclusion International.

Clothes Drop provides stable, consistent and independent funding for Inclusion BC and our participating members. It helps ensure we can be there for people with intellectual disabilities and their families when they need us most, whether that's now or 50 years from now.

The money we earn from Clothes Drop donations stays in the neighbourhoods where donations are collected. It supports important services for children and youth with special needs, adults with intellectual disabilities and their families.

This year Clothes Drop expanded onto Vancouver Island, welcoming Lifetime Networks Victoria as a participating member.

Annual Conference and Learning Event

Every year our conference brings together 600+ people from across the province and the country. They come to share lessons and perspectives on community living and the experiences of people with disabilities. It is the premier learning event on intellectual disability, inclusion and human rights.

The conference offers unique professional development for people working in community living. Professionals exchange success stories and learn from and with people with intellectual disabilities, family members and experts. In 2017, over half of attendees were people working in community living.

"The keynotes and workshops were fantastic. High caliber and inspirational. I came away with over 30 pages of notes. It was well worth the cost to attend."

"One of the best conferences yet."

Education

We continued to build on the momentum to restore supports for inclusion in BC's public schools. We worked to strengthen partnerships between families and educators and provided practical tools to advance inclusion in classrooms and schools across the province.

Sharing practical tools

Over 100 educators, family members and others attended our one-day Inclusive Education Summit in Richmond, BC in June to learn with top Canadian experts.

Advice from the Summit was captured in our report "Restoring Inclusion in BC's Public Schools," and our "Back to School 2017" campaign and resource package.

Recognizing excellence

Our February 2018 Inclusive Education Month campaign reached almost 61,000 people. The social media campaign highlighted the importance of school-wide culture of inclusion, leadership and collaboration. #InclusiveEdMonth

Building partnerships

Inclusion BC worked to strengthen relations with BC's new Education Minister and senior staff in the re-named Inclusive Education Branch, with meetings and ongoing conversations about key issues and priorities. We also continued to build advocacy partnerships with groups like the BC Confederation of Parent Advisory Councils (BCCPAC), the BCEdAccess parents' group, "Your Education Matters" (#30DaysOfEd campaign), the provincial Special Education Partners Group, Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) and BC Teachers Federation (BCTF).

Defending rights

Almost half of the advocacy calls we received from families this year were related to the education system. Many parents were calling because they had been told that their child with special needs could not start school in September along with other students.

In the fall of 2017, a BCCPAC survey confirmed this problem was widespread. The survey found that hundreds of students in 51 school districts were often being forced to miss part or all of their school day.

Inclusion BC spoke up in the media and met with the Minister of Education and ministry officials to defend every child's right to attend school. We understand that school boards are struggling to hire new teachers to implement the 2016 Supreme Court of Canada ruling. At the same time, no other group of students were being denied full access to school because of this.

#KidsCantWait

Inclusion BC met with the Minister of Children and Family Development about ending waitlists for the Supported Child Development Program in BC so that children with special needs can attend inclusive neighbourhood child care programs.

Inclusion BC leads the Kids Can't Wait working committee, which is working to strengthen supports for children with special needs in the early years. This year, we decided to strategically focus on severe waitlists for the Supported Child Development Program, to align with expected federal and provincial investments in child care.

Our work paid off with a promise in the 2018 BC Budget to end waitlists for the Supported Child Development Program.

The Kids Can't Wait Working Committee includes representatives from:

- Inclusion BC
- Family Support Institute
- BC Association for Child Development and Intervention
- Langley Association
- Richmond Society for Community Living
- BC Centre for Ability

Housing

Inclusive Housing

People with intellectual disabilities have been hit hard by the affordable housing crisis in BC. Finding ways to provide more affordable, inclusive housing has been a priority for Inclusion BC and its members over the past year.

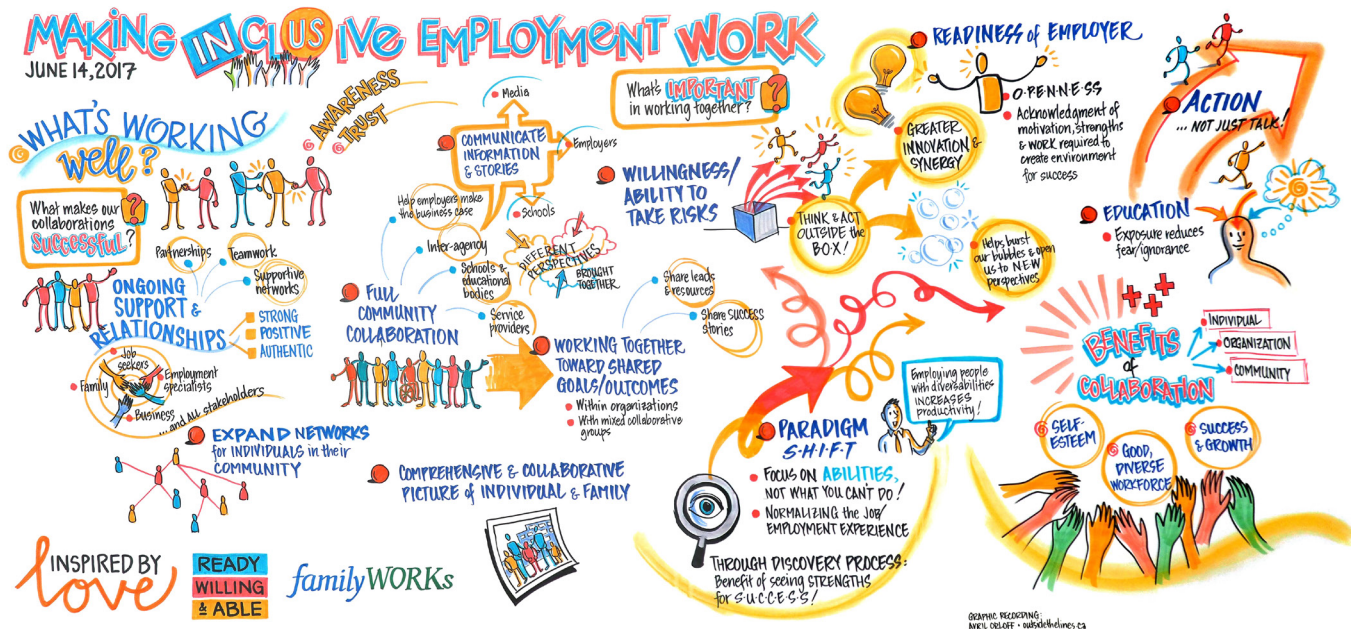

In October, 2017, Inclusion BC and Community Living BC formed an Inclusive Housing Task Force. The task force includes community living agencies, government, family members and people with intellectual disabilities.

In January, 2018, the task force hosted an inclusive housing forum. The expertise and information shared at the forum became the foundation of a three-year housing strategy to provide more inclusive affordable housing for people with intellectual disabilities.

The diverse group of 70 forum attendees included bankers, property developers, planners, architects, family members, people with intellectual disabilities, Inclusion BC member agencies, housing providers and government housing agencies.

Employment

Ready, Willing & Able hosted "Making Inclusive Employment Work," a full day dedicated to advancing inclusive employment and careers success for people with intellectual disabilities and Autism Spectrum Disorder. 158 service providers, employers, families and job seekers attended.

272 British Columbians with intellectual disabilities found work through Ready, Willing & Able. 92% of employers surveyed said employing individuals with intellectual disabilities or ASD has been a positive experience.

Ready, Willing & Able (RWA) is a national initiative that engages, educates and supports employers to hire people with intellectual disabilities and autism spectrum disorder.

Inclusion BC, along with the Pacific Autism Family Network, is an RWA partner, delivering this program across BC.

RWA in British Columbia continues to lead the way on many fronts, as Inclusion BC and our agency partners facilitate and support inclusive employment opportunities across the province.

"... the contributions of RWA go well beyond simply securing jobs. The partnership and organizational development, influencing a 'culture change' with regards to inclusive hiring, and indirect cost savings through reduction of benefit dependence, among other things, are some of these indirect contributions."

Disability Pride 2017 was a Canada 150+ initiative that was led by a steering committee of 27 people from communities across BC. It began as a series of conversations which led to a celebration and march and ended with the launch of a documentary film.

Sherwin Strong: Disability Pride 2017

Disability Pride 2017 culminated with the release of Sherwin Strong: Disability Pride 2017, a 7-minute documentary produced by the Inclusion BC Foundation. The film premiered at screenings across the province through our 3rd annual UN International Day of Persons with Disabilities Film Festival on December 3rd. Watch the film at www.disabilitypride.ca

On June 15, 2017, Inclusion BC presented the first ever disability pride celebration and march in British Columbia. Over 1300 people took to the streets of Richmond to celebrate disability pride.

Film Festival Celebrating the UN International Day of Persons with Disabilities

Hosted by 5 Cities on December 3rd:

*Dawson Creek | Powell River | Victoria | Kelowna |
New Westminster*

Every year the Inclusion BC Foundation partners with the BC Self Advocacy Foundation to host a disability film festival on the UN International Day of Persons with Disabilities. This past year we were proud to partner with the National Film Board to explore the representation of disability in Canadian film. The festival took viewers on a historical journey from the early 1960s to the present day, with the premiere of our own short film, Disability Pride 2017.
